CONTROLS SNAILS, SLUGS, MILLIPEDES AND SLATERS

GUARDIAN Baysol®

SNAIL & SLUG BAIT

PROUDLY MADE IN AUSTRALIA

What makes Baysol the best snail & slug killer?

All snail baits are not the same

While all snail baits work in much the same way, it's the speed of effectiveness of the snail killer that's important. In field trials, Baysol Snail & Slug Bait performed faster and killed a far greater number of snails than any other brands.

Snails and slugs can ravage your garden, ruining your investment in flowers and plants. Isn't it worth choosing the brand long recognised by experienced gardeners as offering better performance – and therefore better value for money!

Why Baysol kills more snails faster

All snail baits are attractive to snails. The difference is that Baysol uses a specifically formulated ingredient that, once ingested by the snail, kills quickly and allows fewer snail to recover.

Why does it last longer in all weather conditions?

Snails are most prevalent on damp and rainy nights. Therefore, it's important that the snail bait you use doesn't deteriorate in damp conditions. In field tests where Baysol and other baits were subjected to high watering, Baysol showed much higher durability, along with better performance. Baysol also offers superior mould resistance, even in the dampest conditions. It gives two weeks of protection against snails, slugs, slaters and millipedes… rain, hail or shine. Eventually, Baysol Snail & Slug Bait will undergo a gradual but complete breakdown into your soil.

How to use Baysol for maximum snail and slug control

Baysol comes in a convenient 600 gram weatherproof plastic pail with carry handle and applicator scoop. Sprinkle Baysol evenly on the area you want to protect – don't leave it in heaps. The best time to scatter Baysol around seedlings is when they're first planted. Sprinkle Baysol among the strappy leaves of plants such as agapanthus and daylilies because snails rest there during the day. Reapply Baysol pellets every 2-3 weeks.
